The Osaka Committee of Chicago Sister Cities International has successfully concluded the first Asian Social Services Exchange with Osaka, Japan. The focus of the program was to bridge cultural and national boundaries and address social challenges of the youth and the elderly including the disabled. This exchange established a new CSCI Social Service Exchange model within an existing committee with a sustainable structure to keep exchanges alternating Chicago as host and visiting delegation for future exchanges.

After an intensive week of site visits that included participation by the City of Chicago's Department of Family and Support Services and a visit to Cook County Juvenile Court, one of the country's largest, the delegates had the opportunity to discuss the overall program with Chicago Social Service professionals about the common social challenges with youth, elderly and the disabled that both Osaka and Chicago face during a public day conference. During this discussion, delegates noted the "the social inequality and the inequality in care as well as the strength of Americans" and were pleasantly surprised that it was "non-governmental entities [that] brought forth this exchange." The Osaka Social Service Committee looks forward to being able to learn these types of lessons during the reciprocal exchange to Japan planned for 2011.
